“ I am so saddened to hear of the passing of Mike, whom we here at Pathobiology fondly referred to as "Mikey". Never a bad word and always a smile, that was Mike. I am grateful that I was here when he made his last trip to Connecticut last summer and we were able to have a conversation and share a hug. To Sandy, over the years of working with Mike here at UConn he would come in and sit and we would chat. Sometimes about nothing but most of the time about life. I have to tell you that I have never seen him as happy as he was the day he met you. You brought such joy to this man (as I'm sure he did to you). As difficult of a time that this is for you, find peace in knowing that when he met you, his life was then complete. I for one will live my life being a little kinder and having the attitude that there is good in all of us, sometimes you just have to look a little harder. I will do that because that's what Mike would do. Prayers to you all!!

“ *I wrote the words "I miss you" in the sand
The blue of the sea that day was too dazzling*

*I wander alone, searching for you
Among the passing crowds in the bustling cities
I turned as though I faintly heard
A voice calling for me, but no one was there*

*Such painful feelings are just hard to bear
The sun burns as it shines down on me*

*I wrote the words "I miss you" in the sand
The blue of the sea that day was too dazzling
When I whispered the words "please get my message"
The shade of the clouds that day was too sorrowful*

*"There's no such thing as a never-ending story"
You murmured as you looked away
Now that I understand the meaning of those words all too late,
You aren't here*

*I finally realised that these days of playing dress-up
Over and over again are just pointless*

*Wanting to tell you those words of "thank you for all you have me"
I ran through the crowd at sunset
My heart is shouting out its need to cry
The sun is laughing as it looks down on me
I miss you*

*I dream, wondering if you will come for me
While I've fallen asleep, worn out from crying; I miss you*

*I wrote the words "I miss you" in the sand
The blue of the sea that day was too dazzling*

*If I bring myself to say the word "goodbye"
I wonder if I can relieve these heartbreaking feelings?
I love you, Michael, my Last Love, Beyond Perfect....your Last
Love....Sandra Fleury*
